The Law Not Everyone Knows

Although charitable organizations are now registering under Virginia's Charitable Solicitation Law, many people who raise money for charitable purposes are unaware of the law or what they should do to register as required by law according to J. A. Morano, Jr., coordinator of Charitable Solicitations.

Morano's office is located in the Office of Consumer Affairs of the Virginia Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services and since December the staff there has been busy not only registering organizations but answering hundreds of questions for interested citizens.

"An estimated one million dollars a day is donated by the generous citizens of the Commonwealth," said Morano. "And until recently, there has been very little if any regulations of these donations. Because of a concern of fraudulent collections the General Assembly in 1974 created the Charitable Solicitations Act. It was amended a number of times and has become fully operational in the last 6 months. The basic theory of the law is that the best weapon against fraudulent solicitation is a knowledgeable public."

Under the law, any person who solicits or obtains contributions from the public is considered a charitable organization. Solicitation is defined as any oral or written request, any announcement to the press, over the radio, on television or by telephone or telegraph or the posting or publishing of any handbill or advertisement. Solicitation also include also includes the offer to attempt to sell any service or tangible item in connection with which any appeal for any charitable purpose or where the name of any charitable organization is used or referred to in any such appeal.

"We are now in the process sof locating charitable organizations in Virginia," said Morano, "to have them file their applications. If any person has questions concerning the law and what they as a charitable organization are required to do under the law, they should contact: Charitable Solicitations, Office of Consumer Affairs, VDACS, 825 East Board St., Richmond, Va. 23219. The telephone number is (804) 786-1343 and 786-1349."

Super Dollar Stores Reports Record Sales

RALEIGH, NC- April 5, 1979 - SUPER DOLLAR STORES, INC. today reported record sales and earnings for its fourth quarter and fiscal year ended February 3, 1979.

For the fiscal year ended February 3, 1979 (53 weeks), net income amounted to $1,226,000 or $1.94 per share versus $1,015,000 or $1.66 per share for the fiscal year ended January 28, 1978 (52 weeks). Sales rose 32% to $43,752,000 in fiscal 1979 from $33,117,000 in fiscal 1978.

In commenting on the record results, Leon Melvin, President, stated, "An excellent fourth quarter resulted in fiscal 1979 being better than we had anticipated earlier in the year. Lower selling, general and administrative costs in relation to sales aided our performance."

Net income amounted to $622,000 or 98c per share for the fourth quarter ended February 3, 1979 (13 weeks) compared to $465,000 or 76c per share for the same quarter last year (12 weeks). Current year fourth quarter sales amounted to $13,726,000, an increase of $3,357,000 or 32% over last year.

Higher Corn Plant Populations Pay

Long-term Virginia crop trials show higher plant populations can mean more than two bushels of corn for each additional 1,000 plants per acre, James A. Smith, Appomattox County Extension agent said.

Seventeen on-farm tests, conducted by Virginia Tech over a 10-year period compared populations averaging 16,500 and 21,500 plants per acre. The higher populations averaged 11 bushels more corn per acre.

The agent added that the test plots were all fertilized the same and nitrogen averaged 150-pounds per acre. Yield for the low population was 134 bushels per acre and for the higher population, the average was 145 bushels per acre.

Assuming one unit of corn at a price of $48 has 80,000 kernels, the seed costs 60 cents per 1,000 kernels or $3 for the 5,000 extra plants. The value of the extra 11 bushels produced is $24.75 at $4.25 per bushel.

"Not a bad investment," the agent said.

Each additional 1,000 plants contributed an average of 2.2 bushels of corn in the tests, but this relationship may not hold true in every situation, Mr. Smith noted.

Some of the factors that should be considered in determining the correct corn population include:

- Soil. More productive soils should have higher populations.
- Hybrid. Some hybrids tolerate higher populations while others tend to produce barren stalks at high population.
- Maturity of hybrid. Generally, an early maturing hybrid produces a short plant with small ears and it takes more to give comparable yields.
- Fertilization. If a producer doesn't fertilize for higher yields, there is no reason to plant a higher population.
- Irrigation. Higher populations are very profitable if irrigaition is to be used. The most critical time to apply water is just prior to and through the pollination period.

Under optimum conditions and with the best soils, a population of about 26,000 plants per acre normally would be at the upper limit.

"However, last year the all-time record yield for corn was 352 bushels per acre, which was accomplished with 29,900 plants per acre," the agent said.

For better upland soils, Mr. Smith recommended 21,000 - 22,000 plants per acre and 16,000 - 18,000 plants per acre for dry soils where irrigation is not used.

Most bags of seed corn will show the approximate number of kernels per unit, but a producer must keep a close count on the number of pounds planted and the number of acres covered to accurately figure the seed population, the agent concluded.

Open Your Heart To a Foster Child

"Sometimes, I feel like leaving home, and sometimes I wish I had one . . ." Mixed feelings, the thoughts of children when things aren't going so well at home. They're scared.

When the social worker says that the youngster has to go live in a "foster home" 'til things get better, the reaction is often fear. While things may be rough at home, it's hard for a child to leave the familiarity of family and friends and go to live with someone else.

"What if they don't like me?" is often the first thought to cross the mind of a child in such a position. They find it hard to believe that anyone would willingly take in someone else's child. They do, little fellow, they do!

Children need foster homes . . . they need the love, the care, the security a foster home can give 'til things get better.

If you are interested in providing a foster home for a child in need you may contact the Appomattox County Department of Social Services, phone 352-7125, Dawn Hersey or Richard Martin will be glad to tell you more about the foster care program.
